Expectant Parents' Class Planned for Health Center

More than 500 persons interested in new babies are expected to attend the discussions which compose the expectant parents' classes to be conducted this fall by the County Health Department in 24 county locations, according to Dr. Roy O. Gilbert, county health officer.

Subject matter for the women, who are prospective mothers, grandmothers and adopting mothers, includes information and demonstration on layettes, baby's bath, nutrition, formula preparation, what to take to the hospital, and care of the new baby. Among the topics discussed in the fathers' sessions, which are special evening classes, are situations created by a new baby in the home.

DIPLOMAS GIVEN

Along with a variety of booklets on mother and baby care, a pink and blue ribboned diploma will be given to graduates of the 12-week course.

The class instruction in no way takes the place of early and regular prenatal care by physicians. Dr. Gilbert pointed out, but in addition to the assistance afforded prospective parents, the classes often do much to aid physicians at a time when the shortage of medical personnel is becoming more acute.

All prospective mothers and those who will have the care of new babies are invited to the classes which are an educational service of the County Health Department. Definite dates will be announced later. Further information may be obtained by telephoning the Torrance Health Center, Torrance 860.
